TODAY & TOMORROW

MOTORS

What may turn out to be the most significant news of recent years is the announcement from Germany that means have been developed for driving motor cars with illuminating gas and wood.

One type of truck now widely used, it is reported, uses gas distilled from wood. It carries wood in a rear compartment, and is said to cost 30 per cent less to operate than if driven by gasoline. Other cars have been quickly and cheaply adapted to use illuminating gas instead of gasoline, a tank of gas being carried in place of the gasoline tank. Also there have been developed new types of steam-propelled automobiles, using a variety of fuels, while a new stationary motor for farm use can be operated on coal dust, vegetable dust, dried leaves or pulverized corn cobs.

There never has been any question in my mind that the problem of the future supply of petroleum was no real problem at all. The time will come, whenever it is economical to do so, when we will again get our power from vegetable products.

I hear from other sources that exponents have not abandoned the idea of steam engines instead of internal combustion motors for atmosphere flights.

I may not live to see it, but some day, I believe, men will fly around the world between sun and sun, with steam-engines propelling their planes at a height of ten miles.

CODDLING

One of the troubles with modern youth, as I have often remarked before, is that they have to much done for them and are not thrown on their own resources early enough or emphatically enough. They grow up expecting society to provide a soft cradle for them to ease their way through life.

That is why I applaud the refusal of the New York State Commissioner of Education to order a school bus to make a half-mile detour to pick up one thirteen-year-old boy. Any boy of thirteen who is not a cripple or an invalid ought to be able to walk half a mile to the bus stop, remarked Commissioner Graves.

The first school I ever attended was more than half a mile from our house. I was under five when I began to walk to school. In my grade school days it was a mile walk each way; when I got to high school it was a three-mile walk. Nobody had ever thought of providing free and easy transportation for schoolchildren in those days. We didn't get even free school books. And we grew up with a pretty clear idea that anything we got out of the world had to be paid for, with money or with labor.

INQUIRY

I would like to hear from anybody who knows of an actual instance of anybody who has received money from the Federal Government for not growing tobacco or cotton or corn or wheat, who had not before been in the business of growing those things.

Every little while somebody tells or prints a story of some man getting a check from Uncle Sam who has never been engaged in the line of agriculture for the control of which the money was paid. These have always seemed like fairy tales to me. I can believe almost anything about the stupidity or carelessness of Government employees, this or any other government, but these yarns have strained my credulity.

They have come to the front again by a statement made in all seriousness by an eminent historian, James Truslow Adams, who told of three such instances. Chester Davis, the AAA administrator, came out with a prompt denial. I have no doubt both men believe they are right. It would be a real public service to get at the facts.

I would like to hear from any reader of this column who can furnish the name, date, place and amount of any such payment to any individual who was not entitled to it under the law.

FOODS

Costs to city folk of the principal articles of food have gone up 34 per cent in the year ending last month, the Department of Commerce reports. Eggs are up 80 per cent, meats 41 per cent, dairy products 29 per cent and so on.

I don't know how much of this increase has filtered back to the farmers who produce the foodstuffs, and how much has been absorbed by middlemen on the way from farm to consumer, but I feel certain that city people won't tolerate much higher prices. Salaries and wages for the general run of city dwellers have not increased in anything like that ratio, many not at all.

If Government would turn its attention to the cost of distribution of food products the cost of living might not rise so fast.

ENCOURAGEMENT

I think the most encouraging news of the past fortnight has been the announcement that two great corporations, Swift & Company and the Pacific & Electric Company are about to offer to investors more than $100,000,000 of new securities to provide additional capital and retire higher cost bond issues.

This is a clear sign that some at least, of the big industrialists have got over some of their fear of the future. If these new issues are readily sold, it will indicate that capital is beginning to come out of hiding. If that acts in motion a general movement of capital into industry, then it will be safe to say that the backbone of the depression has been broken.

It takes more money than the Government can raise to set the wheels of industry running and keep them oiled. Once money is assured of a chance of fair profits, it will go to work.

FIRE

I am the scourge of mankind. My searing blast draws the blood of rich, of poor, of guilty, of innocent. I spare neither age nor sex—the man, the woman, the grandfather, the child—all cover under my vicious strokes.

I prow in the dead of night and in the light of high noon I go abroad, spread desolation and suffering. I lay waste the work of men's hands, and the creations of their minds I do destroy.

No Time Like The Present

By HENRY MORTON ROBINSON

Temperamentally I am not a shouter of glad tidings, but I wish I could inscribe upon a luminous banner the positive joy that shook me recently as I finished reading Fox's "Book of Martyrs." I was happy not because human beings had been subjected to the fiendish torments of steel and fire described in this amazing book but because these agonies were no longer possible in our world, and because the human spirit had somehow outgrown this type of barbarism.

For all its chafings and imperfections, our age is superior in security, comfort, leisure, and economic rewards, to any other period or condition of life that ever existed in this sweating, tear-drenched world. But let this claim seem overbold, let us contrast some of the hazards, misery, and precariousness of life in the best of the "good old days" with the dignity and happiness of life in our own.

Suppose, then, that we begin by circling back to the age of chivalry. When knighthood was in flower (the flowering period filled the 11th century with its perfume) what were the knights actually up to? Why, according to the only authentic records, they were robbing and murdering travelers, violating women, and slaughtering any wretched peasant who tried to protect his mean flock from predatory raids. "What with massacre, rapine, and license raging on every side," cries Gregory of Tours, "human life has as much value as a crushed beetle." And endless recital of murders, perjuries, and tortures fill the pages of Glanville, an historian of the age. Describing the members of Arthur's Round Table he says: "They are boastful, drunken, murderous, vicious, and adulterous. They are generally engaged in civil war and they prey by preference upon the innocent." Filthy, ignorant and blood-thirsty—such were the knights of the Table Round. Yet, since they were the very cream of the age, it is difficult to imagine what the skinned milk was like in those rollicking days when good King Arthur reigned.

The curtain descends, and when it rises again we are in the fields of Normandy in the year 1760. Louis XV glitters at Versailles. Ten million peasants, the "noble savages" of Jean Jacques Rousseau, are tilling the soil of France. La Bruyere gives us a realistic description of them. "Scattered about the country one sees certain animals, male and female; they are black, livid and baked by the sun, and they are attacked by almost visible chains to the soil which they dig. They retire at night into dens, where they live on black bread, water and roots." The French peasant of Rousseau's day was a cross between a rodent and a beast of burden. Twenty-eight separate taxes, payable to the landlord, clergy, and crown, crushed him flat upon the earth, yet he dared not improve his sod but buy a still heavier tax. But taxes were not his only bane. After he had scraped his half-acre of lifeless soil with rude tools, and sowed a few miserable grains of corn, his harvest was invariably trampled by a party of nobles dashing across it in pursuit of a hare. The peasant was not permitted to shoot or trap the deer and Penury follows in his train. Locks keep me not out, and at bars and bolts I lie in vain. I straddle wild winds, and the crack of my whip is heard in the howl of the storm and over the clang of the alarm bells. I reach out to the works of the Almighty and brazenly do I curl my flaming thoughts around His most holy temples. I am the Fire Fiend!

I cannot always be guarded against, but my losses can be covered by insurance. School-Boy Boners Henry the Seventh was cold and preserved. Blake was playing bowls when the Armada was sighted in the Channel. Asked why he did not come he replied that his bowls were more important.

A testotoler is a man you never see drinking. Where was Caesar born? Caesar was born in triumph to the Capitol. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain was a conservatory. He used to be in the House of Lords and had a glass eye.

Henry VIII was the world's greatest widower, and in later life he developed a limp through having an abscess on his knee. Messalina was the wife of Mussolini a Roman Emperor. Some insects multiply so rapidly that if left alone they would soon drive man from the face of the earth. They have many enemies, birds eat vast numbers, and they fight and kill each other.

The FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES M.D.

THE RADIO AND THE SICK ROOM

Unfortunately there comes a time when the patient is a "shut-in"; it is just possible that the chances of recovery are about 1 to 1,000; so the personnel of the sick room concerns the patient very deeply. It is quite possible that a nurse may be in attendance.

The radio is everywhere. Sets are small and will occupy very little space; a good radio program will do the patient more good mentally than a bedside visitor. The only difficulty will be in selecting programs that are soothing and interesting to the patient.

If the patient is fond of music be careful to tune in for real music; such as he will enjoy hearing. By no means should he have the crazy variety of jazz; conversely, I would not select for him such musical programs as songs of death, funerals or such as suggest the fatal ending of sickness.

Better to have the election returns, or even a report of the ball game; in other words, the radio should be a benefit instead of a means of depression of the nerves. Under no circumstances should the program be noisy, or unduly exciting.

It is often to be noted that the radio may stand in a semi-distant room, where children and house callers may gather and tune into hilarious stuff; the sick man will either be annoyed or excited unduly. A radio under such circumstances can not do other than harm to the patient's nerves. I would always prefer a small set carefully guarded for the sick room. Bear in mind this letter is a suggestion for certain cases; the acute, fever-case or one that is extremely nervous had better have little to do with radio. Consult your family doctor always.

Ontario produced about fourteen per cent of the Canadian commercial strawberry crop in 1934; British Columbia, three-tenths; Quebec, two-tenths, and New Brunswick and Nova Scotia combined, one-tenth.

HOW TO PREVENT LOSSES AMONG SUCKLING PIGS

Nutritional anemia is one of the common causes of death among suckling pigs, particularly among those raised under modern and less artificial conditions. The winter and early spring farrowed pigs, closely confined to comparatively small pens with a board or concrete floor and receiving no minerals apart from those contained in the mother's milk, become anemic and the mortality among them is high. This condition is not found to any extent in pigs which are born during the late spring and summer months, when they are out and in the sunshine, and when they have free access to suitable soil and vegetation. Some pigs die suddenly while still fat but usually there are symptoms which indicate the presence of anemia, such as lack of vigor and thrift, diarrhoea, paleness of color, a laborious, jerky breathing, a wrinkled skin and a loss in weight. This condition is most critical in young pigs that are housed continuously when they are two to four weeks old, and it often affects the fattest and sleekest pigs in a litter.

Anemia in pigs, as the name suggests, is due to lack of blood, which is traceable to a deficiency of iron in the milk supplied by the nursing sow. The treatment lies in prevention. At the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta, a practice which has been followed for a number of years with satisfactory results as a means of prevention of loss in early farrowed litters is to place soda, approximately one foot square in size, in the pens with the sow and pigs each day. Soil contains considerable quantities of iron and the young pigs in rooting around in the dirt eat sufficient quantities to make good the shortage of iron in the milk. Lacombe, soda is stored in a suitable place for winter use, from areas on which pigs have not been allowed to run, so as to guard against infestation of parasites in the young nursing pig.

It may also be accomplished in preventing the disease by providing means whereby the young pigs may exercise in sunlight in outside yards whenever the weather permits.

THE TUBER UNIT SEED POTATO

Producers of certified seed potatoes are confronted with the problem of controlling such virus diseases as leaf roll, mosaic, and spindle tuber, in an effort to maintain their stock, at the high quality demanded by the markets today. The tuber-unit seed plot offers a simple and practical method of controlling these diseases at practically no extra expense. A tuber-unit seed plot may be large or small according to the needs of the individual grower. It should be located as far as possible from all other potatoes. Choose only good type tubers from a crop which has passed inspection for several years. Prepare the soil in the usual way and mark it out with rows three feet apart at a depth of about three inches. The tubers are cut and planted individually into units of four sets as follows: Cut tuber No. 1, into four equal sets and plant them each one foot apart. That is known as tuber No. 1. Next leave a space unplanted of at least one set. Then take tuber No. 2, cut it into four sets and plant in a unit as before. Leave a space again and continue with all the tubers until the plot is finished. The distance between the last set of one unit and the first set of the next unit will, then be two feet. This makes unit identification much easier later in the season.

The plot is cultivated and thoroughly sprayed in the usual manner except that extra care must be exercised in controlling all insects. Before the regular spraying dates, the plot should be carefully inspected for virus and other diseases and any possible foreign varieties. If any unit has one or more diseased plants in it, the whole unit of four plants must be removed, care being taken to dig out the old set and any new tubers that may have formed. Repeat this roguing of diseased plants throughout the season. The result will be a crop of relatively disease-free pure seed for part of the main crop the succeeding year. Sufficient tubers or units should be chosen from the tuber-unit plot to form another seed plot for the next year.

For further information write to, or consult your nearest Laboratory of Plant Pathology or Seed Inspection Service.

THE BOOK

by BRUCE BARTON

"The Holy Bible"

TRUE, TO THE END

The king of the country was Josiah who meant well and tried to bring about a revival of religion. Apparently Jeremiah correctly estimated the ineffectiveness of Josiah's character and realized that the improvement was merely superficial. At any rate, he did not ally himself with the reform movement, which quickly died after the king's death.

From this time on, under the driving king Jehoiakim, Jeremiah was a stormy voice, denouncing wickedness in the nation and folly at court and prophesying that Nebuchadnezzar would surely conquer Jerusalem. He was imprisoned. When he had written out his sermons and prophecies & was reading them at court, the king took the roll, slashed it with a pen knife and threw it into the open fire. Finally the prophet was compelled to flee with a little group of refugees into Egypt.

There the women of the company found a new faith in religion. When Jeremiah spoke to the men, saying, "Stop your wives from worshipping the moon," they blantly refused. Then all the men which knew that their wives had burnt incense upon other gods... answered Jeremiah, saying, "As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do whatever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen of heaven and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done... for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil. But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven and to pour out drink offerings to her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by

Can't Get The Muskies Into The Camera!

We were elected to the Fish Lairs Club in Fairbanks, Alaska. The ceremony was held on the sidewalk outside the Hotel Restaurant, where we had just purchased a dead grayling to use in a few photographs. In vain we tried to explain that we were not in the habit of buying fish for photographs, that we had caught plenty of graylings ourselves, that unfortunately we just happened to forget to put any fish in our camera. Corey Ford and Alastair McBain in a recent issue of "Colliers" mention Ford and McBain are both very prominent in the American magazine field, and are also devoted fishermen. The secretary of the Fish Lairs Club interrupted us solemnly, cast a brief but significant glance at this fellow member, gathered about us on the sidewalk, and cleared his throat.

"It gives me great pleasure," he said, tucking our membership cards in the bands of our fishing hats, "to congratulate you upon your unanimous election to the Fish Lairs Club."

To be sure, there is nothing very exclusive about the Ancient Order of Fish Lairs. Any angler can qualify. The organization has neither race nor color creed. It draws no fishing lines.

There are no regular meetings of the Fish Lairs Club. They are held any time any place on the bank of a stream, in the Pullman smoker, in the parlor, wherever there are two or more fishermen gathered together. For example, an self-appointed field secretary of the organization, we made a careful survey this past summer of some half-dozen of the

10 YEARS AGO

Mr. Fred Lepper was called suddenly to Ontario last week owing to the serious illness of his mother at her home there.

We are glad to know that Mr. H. Brunker who was recently operated upon for goitre, is progressing favorably.

Mr. J. Winters who has been spending a long holiday with relatives in Luxembourg, France, has now returned to his home in the Battleview district.

Work has started on the erection of a new bungalow for Mr. J. Rutledge on Main street with Mr. P. D. Laird the contractor.

Friday night saw the Elite theatre ablaze with color and decorations when the ladies of the W.I. staged a very enjoyable St. Patrick's dance which was crowdedly attended.

The hockey game between our local team and the Chauvinites with the Dawson trophy as the honor, proved to be the most fastest and roughest games on local ice this season. Wainwright were winners by a 9-5 score.

Mr. Arthur Gibson of Hope Valley has just returned from a holiday in Seattle with his wife and daughter, and has again taken up residence on the farm.

20 YEARS AGO

Little Gordon Kenny who had the misfortune to fall and fracture his arm while playing one day last week is now hunting along nicely.

G. H. Hunt and Son, cattle ranchers of Heath, shipped 115 head of steers from this point on Thursday. They report good returns.

Although her injuries were not serious, Mrs. E. Goddard (whose death is chronicled in this issue) suffered a painful accident on Saturday last when she fell beneath the wheels of a democrat and the accident necessitated her removal to the Mitchell hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Moffat who have been visiting their daughters Mrs. W. E. Washburn and Mrs. J. E. Davy returned this week to their home in Port McNicholl, Ontario.

Miss Ethel Johnson left Wainwright on Saturday for Winnipeg. She intends to take up training as a nurse in one of the hospitals there.

We are informed of the death of Mrs. Watson, wife of Dr. Watson formerly of this town, who passed away on Sunday last, leaving to mourn a husband and three small children.

Mr. H. Montgomery left this week for Calgary and the fact that "Monty" intends returning accompanied by his bride is sufficient evidence of his reason for the trip.

ASPEN

Messrs W. Bushey, Bud Kinnell and W. Kinnell journeyed to Bloomington on Wednesday to play for the big dance there. Owing to the weather turning so cold, the crowd was only a small one.

Remember March 29th—that's the night of the big masquerade at Aspen, and all are invited for a good time.

The meeting in the interests of social credit on the 21st was well attended to hear Mr. Landreau of Calgary.

Quite a number of our farmers are cleaning their grain these days in preparation for the Spring work on the land.

A large crowd of friends and neighbors surprised Miss Phyllis Challenger on Saturday evening, that day being her birthday. Everybody reports having a real good time. A splendid lunch was served at midnight.

ASCOT

Mr. and Mrs. Wheaton and Miss Nicholson were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Wheaton on Sunday, it being the celebration of Elaine's and Dorren's birthdays.

Miss Margaret McQuaker spent the week end with her parents here. We are pleased to know that Robert McQuaker has had the tube removed and is progressing nicely in the local hospital.

A few in the district attended Mr. E. McLean's sale last week.

Quite a large crowd turned out on Friday evening to the school, where a Social Credit Study Club was organized with the following officers in charge: A. C. Hutchinson, pres.; Wallace Wheaton, vice-pres.; R. H. Sisset, secretary. The next meeting is on Friday at 8 p.m. Everybody welcome.

waters in North America. We trod Stuart Lake, Takla and Trembleur; we took rainbow up to ten pounds; reluctantly we returned to Douglas lodge, ready to meet the Pacific-Alaska plane that would swoop us up from Stuart Lake like a fish hawk the following morning, and bear us in its talons to Alaska.

While fishing for Tyee salmon, off Campbell River on Vancouver Island, Corey Ford had the great fortune to land a fifty-six pounder which qualified him for a Gold Button under Tyee Salmon Club rules. The gold button is one of the most sought-after prizes in the fishing world.

With heavy hearts the members of the Fish Lairs Club lifted the salmon and hung it on the scales. The salmon weighed fifty-six pounds. Very solemnly we took our worn membership cards from the bands of our hats and placed them in the salmon's gaping mouth.

It is with deep regret that we have tendered our resignations to the Fish Lairs Club of Fairbanks, Alaska, we feel that we are not worthy of the honor after all. We resign in favor of that fish.

HEATH

Mr. H. C. Boyd addressed a meeting at Heath school on Wednesday evening on the subject of Social Credit.

On Friday evening Mr. Landreau of Calgary was the speaker on Social Credit. At this meeting a Social Credit group was formed with Mr. D. Potvin as president, Mr. L. Wallace as vice-president and Mr. Mockford as secretary-treasurer. The three officers will attend the convention at Wainwright on Monday, March 25th as delegates from the Heath group. One Wednesday evening, March 28 another meeting will be held at Heath for further discussion of the subject and a report from the delegates.

Our sympathy is extended to Mrs. Smith of Heath in the recent bereavement of her father at Winters, Saskatchewan. Mrs. Smith is again at home after attending the funeral at Winters.

Mrs. Helen Vail and family of Wainwright were luncheon guests at the home of Mrs. C. Dixon on Thursday.

The St. Patrick's W.A. met on Saturday at the home of Mrs. L. H. H. the day having been changed on account of the stormy weather. A number of members and visitors were present and a pleasant afternoon was spent. Among the guests the ladies were pleased to welcome Mrs. C. Dixon, Mrs. Helen Vail, Miss M. Spence, Mrs. F. Lowe, Misses Alberta and Alma Potvin and Misses Jean and Beatrice Touchette.

Don't forget the concert and dance to be held in Heath school on Friday, March 29. The play which is to form the main part of the program, consists of a group of girls supervised by Miss Spence and is entitled "You Wouldn't Fool Me". The cast is as follows: Hugh Cameron, Edith Turnbull, Ivy Cameron (his wife) Jean Cummings; Nancy Cameron (her daughter) Alberta Potvin; Andrew Davoy, Alma Potvin; Agatha Golden (his secret wife) Betty Wallace; Grandma Cameron, Mary Wallace; Governor Goldie (the absent minded professor) Oliver Jones; Bruce O'Mara (Nancy's aunt) Beatrice Touchette; Lucy (Negress maid) Margaret Spence; Charles (chauffeur) Dilys Jones.

HOPE VALLEY

An old time dance was sponsored in the Rosedale hall on the 22nd which was a great success.

A large crowd turned out to the Social Credit meeting in Rosedale hall on Thursday and everybody was well satisfied with the speech.

Congratulations from the whole district go to the newly weds of last week, Miss Eva Sewell to Mr. L. McPhee.

Quite a large crowd attended the rink on Sunday last to watch the hockey game between Silgo and Edgerton but were disappointed as Edgerton failed to show up.

EDGERTON

The second mixed bonspiel came to a successful conclusion on Saturday evening. The final games brought together rinks skipped by Pawssey and Brown in one side of the draw and Bairdridge and Milne on the other side. I guess this means it to a very good season of curling.

Rev. W. Bainbridge was a visitor to Ribstone, between trains last Tuesday.

Rev. J. R. Geason of Irma was the special speaker at the Bloomington Y.P.S. last Tuesday. A large crowd enjoyed his excellent address on "A trip through Yellowstone Park."

We hear of an excellent play being staged by the Sunnyvale Junior U.F.A. last Wednesday in Bloomington hall. Unfortunately the very severe weather and the poor roads kept a lot of people at home. Why not let us see it in Edgerton?

The Edgerton Study group met last Thursday. It was decided to send three delegates to the Social Credit Convention in Wainwright on Monday.

Mr. H. C. Boyd is a Wainwright visitor during the week end.

Crows, gophers and some other signs of spring are now in evidence in these parts—we bid them welcome.

A large crowd had a good time at the dance held in the town hall on Friday evening.

A giant land-tortoise died on the island of Montserrat, the Indian Ocean, which was known to be one hundred and fifty-two years old, one of the oldest vertebrates ever known.

LIFE OF WOODSWORTH By OLIV E. ZIEGLER

The leader of the party which health—the speedily emerged as a un-called itself the C.C.F. is a dramatic personality. That two hundred pages is too short for an account of the life of a politician is a rare criticism but seems to be the chief criticism of this book. This volume is one of the most important studies of living Canadian politicians and is in no sense a party panegyric and contains little indeed of C.C.F. dogma. One of the consequences of the book may be the setting up of a tendency—highly desirable in itself—on the part of the C.C.F. to change its character from that of a missionary society for the spread of a closely defined doctrine, to that of a political party taking its cues largely from the personality of its leader. Compared with this volume, the "Life" of Mr. Bennett and Mr. King have the Victorian drabness of careers in a Self Help volume of the late Dr. Smiles.

Possessing all the qualities of culture and oratorical power which will insure a minister a place of influence and a comfortable income in a fashionable city church, Mr. Woodsworth speedily found that that was not the work he wanted to do, nor the kind of work that he felt needed most urgently to be done. The sacrifice involved, both for himself and his family was immense.

Followed some years of social service usually accompanied by some form of organization, which led to successive dismissals, until finally he found himself a dock-worker on the Vancouver waterfront, a position from which fortunately for his Sunday last saw Mr. and Mrs. F. Seabrook the guests of their daughter, Mrs. T. Goddard of Gilt Edge.

The whist drive and dance on Friday evening last at the schoolhouse was well attended and all present reported a good time. The prize winners were: Ladies: Miss Clara Brassard, 1st; Mr. O. Croteau, 2nd; Miss B. Roberts, consolation. Gentlemen: Mr. J. Keen, 1st; Mr. A. Muddie, 2nd; Mr. H. Killy, consolation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Carron were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Croteau at their home for the past week.

The sympathies of the district are extended to Mr. E. Goddard and family in their recent bereavement.

SLUMBERING GOLD

by Aubrey Boyd

SYNOPSIS—On the old one-side wheeler "George E. Starr," on his way to the Yukon gold fields in the first rush of '91, Speed Malone, experienced gold-camp follower, gambler, and young Ed Matland, on his first trip, trying to recoup his lost family fortune, struck up a strange friendship. Matland, left Speed playing Solo with two other men and wandered forward, to be sharply recalled by the report of a pistol and the news that his partner had been shot and had gone overboard. Ed jumped in after him, without second thought. But the cold waters got him, and in the end it was Speed who did the rescuing, holding Ed's head above water until they were taken aboard a little boat by a French fisherman from Seattle. The big ship went on without them. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"A bunch of us," said Brent, with a smoulder in his tired eyes, "aim to call a camp meetin' at one o'clock—when the crowd's in and before the backtrailin' starts, so we can get a full vote. That's why I spoke to ye. Can we figure on you boys to stand in?"

Speed looked at his partner. It was their one remaining chance of keeping Garnet on the trail. "You can count on us to vote," he said "but that's all."

Brent signified that he asked for nothing more, and leaving them, went up the trail to collect more voters.

When they returned to Liasville the camp was crowded. Here and there the dispirited faces of mud-dragged men showed that Fallon's decision meant the end of the trail for some of them, but they accepted it as the harsh law of the stampede. Brent's chance, even at a hand-grip, was more than doubtful. The trail of the partners had reached a critical impasse.

Before they reached the cache, they met Garnet coming toward them, looking refreshed and clean as he stepped carefully along the river path. He listened in silence to Speed's tactical account of the trail and agreed to attend the mass meeting.

But he was visibly more interested in some sounds that came to them from the vicinity of the bridge. A metallic "come on" chant rang stridently through the hollow, above a babel of voices and the river's bawl. "Not a game of chance, friends. A simple test of skill. The quickness of the hand deceives the eye."

"Suppose we give that a spin while waiting for one o'clock," Garnet suggested. "You need some relaxation."

"You can spit it," Speed declined. "If I had the jack it wouldn't relax me none to give it to a shell rigger."

The sunlight that pierced the canyon mist fell on a noisy crowd around the dealer's pick table, many of them not following the game, but simply herding there to wait for the backtrail to clear. A player had just placed a bet. From the higher ground at the bridge, the dealer saw it to be the man with the sheepskin coat—Pete's partner Bill. Noticeably drunk, Bill was swaying on his heels. Fallon and one of his outfit stood near, watching him play.

"I guess we'll pass this," said Garnet prudently.

Speed did not answer. His attention had been arrested by the pallid, narrow-eyed face of the dealer, on which the sunlight fell squarely. "Seems like I've seen that bird somewhere," he muttered.

White Bill stood shifting, his wealth between his hands, the yellow head of his young partner appeared beside him. Pete was trying to pull him out of the game. Ignored by Bill, the boy said something to Fallon—not audible from the bridge. Fallon brushed him out of the way with an impatient, backward flick of his hand. The blow might have been unintentional, but the hand was heavy and ringed. It cut the boy's cheek and set his stumbling.

"Darned shame," said Garnet.

Speed swore to himself. Pete broke away and went up the canyon while Bill was oblivious to everything but the stakes he was vaguely counting. The dealer hastened to cover the incident. "Not a game of chance, miners. The quickness of the hand."

"Here the dealer's voice hung trailing, his cold eyes, roving over the crowd, suddenly encountered and locked with Speed's. A look of incredulous wonder pierced his mask.

"A thousand," murmured Bill. "Shoot it, Bill," said Fallon. "I'll copper you some in case you lose." He laid a small stack of gold pieces on the table as Bill hunched forward and placed his double handful of money.

The dealer's eyes, which had returned to the game, quivered upward as a clear, direct, suddenly spoke over the heads of the crowd.

"I'll bet a thousand on Bill to win."

The discovery that it was Speed who had spoken astonished no one quite as much as Matland, who knew the limits of his resources. The offer had been made to the dealer, but Fallon wheeled around with a scowl that darkened when he recognized the speaker. Cocking his cigar, he drew a large roll from his pocket and slapped down a counted sum on the table. "There's a thousand," he said. "There's a thousand," he said. "There's a thousand," he said.

"Look out!" The words fell from the dealer's lips in an involuntary murmur.

"Oh, he went shoot," said Fallon. "He's one of them would-be-gamblers. Chews a lot but ain't got no fangs. Ain't got no money neither."

Speed, in fact, had not moved except to reach into his pocket for money that was not there. He had not looked for this exact result, and was still framing his next move. None the less, his composure remained perfect—even when, to his surprise, his fingers closed over a wad of bills. Fortune sometimes favors the absolute gambler. This time the means of his miracle was Garnet, who had quietly slipped the roll into his pocket.

"I mean money," growled Fallon, gle-bodlin' brains on what this crook's playin' for. Who is he? Where's he from? Blowed into camp two days ago on a busted drifter; now he's flashin' money. Ever meet a 'fiker' on the gold trails? Well, the inside crowd in the Yukon is workin' hard to plaster over good locations before the stampede arrives, and here's a slick frame to freeze you out."

The argument was far-drawn, but tunningly gauged to an audience of credulous, impatient, gold-frenzied men.

"Speed parried it promptly. 'That won't hold gravel,' he declared. 'The river don't freeze till the first week in October. Four days won't hurt, that margin, and most of the camp will see time on a good trail.'"

"What you ain't primed to answer," returned Fallon, "is who you are and what you're doin' here with that bunch of money and no outfit."

The outlaw crossed a cigarette paper. "You're switchin' you bet, he said evenly. 'The question is whether the boys want to make a trail. But if you want to talk personal—how does it come that a man who's so all-fired anxious to see ever one get to Dawson, spends his time makin' this miner drunk and at the first hint of delay. "You can't run a whipsnapper in this game," he said. "Doubt struggled with fear in the dealer's face when the insult was ignored. Speed walked up to the table stripping a sheaf of clean one hundred dollar bills from Garnet's roll, and laid along side Fallon's. Then his eyes pinned the dealer. 'You can deal this any way you figure healthy,' he said. 'Any remember I'm backin' Bill to win.'"

"No," said Speed, a slight twist on his lips, "the play ain't through yet."

The dealer's pale visage turned paler; he lowered his head to conceal a twitching of his mouth. There was a moment of silence. A hum ran through the crowd as the dealer lifted the sheaf. Fallon gripped an oath of chagrin and disbelief. Bill had won. Speed picked up his own and the other's stake, and was turning away when Fallon called him back.

"What I took ye for," snarled the dealer. "A braggart and run gambler. Pull up there, fellow. The play ain't through yet."

A slight twist in the corner of Speed's mouth showed that this was not unexpected. "No," he said, "the play ain't through yet, only it's a new game. There's a stretch of trail between here and the bridge up the line that needs fixin' mighty bad. You're the boss of this camp, and you've blocked the trail to fix it. You've got a big string of nudes and can take a chance of lightning brought in one haul. You don't give a damn for the small miner who has to rely his pack over that slew with me horse or none. Well, some of us figure different. Four days' work with the camp drafted will put the trail in shape. It's the only chance for a lot of the boys who've sunk their last red to get here. You can't run a white miner's camp without takin' count of the common people or none. If you doubt it, Fallon, and want to gamble, I'll bet you this yer thousand the camp ain't back of ye."

The stillness in the canyon was complete, save for the gush of the river. Quietly as the words had been spoken, they had touched every instinct of the crowd at once. Showed malice curled Fallon's eyes. "I'll take your bet," he said. "These men know what a delay would mean if you think you can halt 'em, the fix will cost you a thousand and somethin' more."

Now that it had an outlet, the response of the crowd broke loose. "I'm with you, brother," a man called out to Speed. "That's talkin'!" and similar endorsements mounted over the voices of dissent.

"Hold on," barked Fallon, above the tumult, "and swivel your nuz-persuadin' him to bust himself at a skin game. Another is that coward's lick you took on the white back." The cool tenacity of the challenge held the crowd in a spell. "You ask where I come from," Speed continued. "I come from a state where men low enough to do a thing like that would be booted out of a camp of horse thieves."

Fallon's hands flashed to his guns and stopped there, a puzzled seam deepening between his eyes. He could not imagine anyone taking such a chance unless he were sure of an advantage. On Speed's part it was sheer gambling. A man so reckless yet clear-headed gestures of which instances are not unknown in the annals of the West, where gunmen have sometimes been challenged and held without the touching of a weapon.

The hush was suddenly broken by Brent, who had arrived with his backers, and judged it time to cut this fuse. "Who's fer fixin' the trail? Make it a showdown, boys!"

The uproar forced Fallon to suspend dealings with Speed while he met a different threat. Heads were counted in a confused din. A majority showed for Brent's proposition, but many had not declared themselves either way.

"That's no showdown!" yelled Fallon. "To fix the trail you've got to fix it. Try that and you'll damn soon find how much of the camp's behind me. You can't bar it."

"We'll go to bedrock on that point right now," Brent shot back. "We've got the man who'll see the job done, and the miners' committee sure needs a new chairman. Get behind this men."

There was a tangled burst of enraged and jubilant shouts. In the confusion it was a moment before Speed could make himself heard. This was more than he had counted on. "I'll fix the man for the job," he said. "I'm a stranger and ain't patient enough to argue with suspicious. Pop up one of your men."

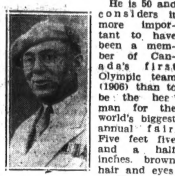

"Potence be damned," growled a sun-browned Arizona miner. "Who all's askin' you to be patient?"

Fallon, sure of himself now, lit a fresh cigar and flicked the match meditatively in Speed's direction. "The man don't live," he said complacently. "who can bar a trail when my outfit get ready to go through. As for this modifier, he don't amount to a puff of smoke, and I'll show you he don't." And the camp hush put his hands on his guns. "I called him yesterday for a liar and a horse thief, whichever was his fightin' word. But that was too mild, I say now that he's a snokin' liar and a yellow covate, boy."

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

SCALLOPED POTATOES

Wash, pare, and cut four potatoes in one-fourth inch slices. Put a layer in a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and dot over with one-half tablespoon of butter. Repeat until all the potatoes are used. A few slices of onion may be added if desired. Add hot milk until it may be seen through the top layer; bake one and one-fourth hours or until potatoes are soft.

FRANCONIA POTATOES

Prepare as for boiled potatoes, and parboil ten minutes; drain, and place in pan in which meat is roasting; bake until soft, basting with fat in pan, when basting meat. Time required for baking about forty minutes. Sweet potatoes may be prepared the same way.

POTATO CROQUETTES

2 cups hot ricd potatoes
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon celery salt
Few grains cayenne
Few drops onion juice
Yolk one egg
1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley
Mix ingredients in order given, and beat thoroughly. Shape, dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs again; fry one minutes in deep fat, and drain on brown paper. Croquettes are shaped in a variety of forms. The most common way is to first form a smooth ball by rolling one round tablespoon of mixture between hands. Then roll on a board until of desired length, and flatten ends.

"PINAPRIOCA" MAKES 'EM DANCE WITH JOY

If you have never tried an apricot and pineapple combination in a topsy pudding, you certainly have missed something. The delicate quick cooking tapioca makes a perfect background for this delightful flavor combination.

Apricot and Pineapple Delight
1/2 cup dried apricots
1/2 cup apricot juice and water
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 slices canned pineapple finely cut
1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
Cut apricots in half, cover with water and soak 2 hours. Cover, and simmer 15 minutes, or until tender. Drain, measure, liquid and add enough water to make three cups. Combine with apricots and remaining ingredients in a greased baking dish, mixing thoroughly. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until done, stirring every 10 minutes, and again when removing from oven. Serve with cream. Serves eight.

Egg Junket

1 Junket Tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
2 egg yolks
3 tablespoons sugar
Small pinch salt
1 pint milk
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
Dissolve Junket tablet in one tablespoon cold water. Beat egg yolks slightly, add sugar, salt and vanilla flavoring to milk. Warm to lukewarm—not hot, stirring constantly. Add dissolved junket tablet. Stir quickly a few seconds and pour into dessert glasses. Chill in refrigerator.

ASPICS ADD VARIETY

There are innumerable ways to serve the small amounts of left-over vegetables, meat chicken and fish, that otherwise might go to waste. Tempting jellied bouillon, chopped or cut in cubes, makes a sparkling garnish to "dress up" a dinner. You will find these recipes especially useful now that the Lenten season is upon us.

Jellied Tuna Fish and Vegetables

1 package Gelatin Aspic
1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water
1 cup tuna fish, shredded
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped pickle
1/2 cup peas
1 teaspoon onion juice
Dissolve Gelatin Aspic in boiling water; add cold water. Chill. Mix tuna fish, lemon juice and pickles and let stand. When gelatin mixture begins to thicken, stir in tuna fish, peas and onion juice. Mould in loaf pan and chill until firm. Serves eight.

Egg and Pickle Salad

1 package Gelatin Aspic
1 cup boiling water

1/2 cup cold water
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup mayonnaise
4 hard cooked eggs
1/4 cup chopped pickles
Dissolve Gelatin Aspic in boiling water; add cold water. Chill until it begins to thicken, then add mayonnaise. Halve eggs, lengthwise, then cut in thick slices and add to gelatin mixture; add pickles. Pour in mould; chill until firm. If desired, 4 tablespoons ketchup or chili sauce may be added with the cold water. Serves six.

1 package Gelatin Aspic
1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water
1 cup tuna fish, shredded
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped pickle
1/2 cup peas
1 teaspoon onion juice
Dissolve Gelatin Aspic in boiling water; add cold water. Chill. Mix tuna fish, lemon juice and pickles and let stand. When gelatin mixture begins to thicken, stir in tuna fish, peas and onion juice. Mould in loaf pan and chill until firm. Serves eight.

NEWS & VIEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Good, on March 24th, a girl.

BORN—To Rev. and Mrs. Sage, in Cape Town, S. Africa, on February 20th, a girl. (Mrs. Sage will be remembered as the former Miss Amy Withnell, of Heath.)

Mrs. W. G. Pigeon, who has been visiting at Watrous for a week or so, returned home on Saturday last. Mr. Pigeon is still at Watrous.

An interesting programme of bible lecture recordings by Judge Rutherford, together with an address from Mr. C. Roberts, will be given in the I.O.O.F. hall on Wednesday evening, April 3rd, at eight o'clock. All welcome; no collection.

Mr. Jas. Guthrie is in Edmonton this week attending meetings presided over by officials of the Imperial Oil Co. from Toronto.

Mr. M. G. Wallace, who for the past six weeks has been working at Mariboro, Alta., returned home here last week end.

Mr. Tom Jones is a patient at the local hospital, having been brought in from his home at Heath on Friday last.

We learn on good authority that Mr. Wm. Crowe is completing arrangements whereby his family will be moving to Vancouver in the near future. Bill, however, will still hold down his job as night foreman at the roundhouse here.

The Atlas Lumber Co. has this week received a shipment of hardwood suitable for wagon and implement repairs. Phone 67.

Only a little damage occurred on Monday when the fire brigade had a call to the house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. E. Boyd on Sixth avenue east. The fire started from a defective chimney.

The premises formerly occupied by the Wainwright Gas Co. on Main street have now been changed into the dry and cartage office of Bill Bibby. Don Goodrich, the Massey Harris implement man is there also.

Mr. W. Scutlings having secured employment at Lloydminster he left for that town during the past week.

During the bad walking of the next two months, books will be delivered and collected for patrons of the library. Phone 110.

The decorators have now completed their contract at the Federal building in town, and the whole place looks a lot smarter and brighter therefrom.

We understand that Mr. Tom Martin has been appointed local agent for the North Star Oil Co., which appointment was formerly held by Mr. H. Messer.

During the past few days Mr. T. Code, a horse buyer from Montreal has been scouring the district for animals for the eastern market. From all reports his quest has not been very successful as the class of horses he requires are needed here in the district.

Get your house-cleaning done now while help is plentiful and before the high winds and dust storms interfere. The Atlas Lumber Co. have a large stock of all kinds of house-cleaning materials on hand; and these are at city prices.

PUBLIC HOLIDAY

ON MAY SIXTH

JUBILEE DAY

Advice from Ottawa states that proclamations are to be posted in every postoffice in the Dominion making May Sixth next, Jubilee Day, a public holiday in conjunction with the whole of the British Empire in honor of King George and Queen Mary.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Herman Messer is still very sick at his home.

Having recovered sufficiently from her recent operation, Sister Edwina, the superior of St. Joseph's convent, has now returned to her charge here.

The lower grade school having been properly and completely fumigated after the closing for a scarlet fever case, it was re-opened on Monday last with all three grades going full blast.

Joe Welch, issuer of car licenses, has received instructions that the reduced rates can be allowed on plates sold on Saturday next, March 30th.

We learn that Mr. Frank Minter, who has been spending the winter in the Old Country, is now en route home. Doubts are expressed as to his returning here alone.

Mrs. W. A. Knowles returned last week after an extended visit with her mother, Mrs. J. Coombe, at Ottawa, who fortunately is now nicely recovered from her recent sickness.

We are glad to note that Mr. H. Clifton, the local government vendor, who was an appendix patient at the hospital last week is now recovering very nicely, and feeling a lot better.

If you are involved in a car accident causing injury to persons or property of another and are not able to settle the damages at once you are prohibited from driving a car. A small premium of around $20 according to the size of your car will pay all damages awarded against you. See Joe Welch who handles this insurance for further data.

Mr. G. Andrews of the Bank of Montreal staff, is away visiting his parents in the south of the province, by way of his annual vacation.

Steve Bowerman is advertising an auction sale of the household effects of Mr. Bruce Chalk for Saturday afternoon next at the residence on Third avenue east, owing to Mr. Chalk moving to his new location at Grand Prairie.

By way of brightening up for Spring, the interior of the Standard pharmacy is receiving a couple of coats of paint these days.

Art. Dupre reports the receipt of another two cars of Ford cars during the past week, and we understand that these are practically all disposed of on order.

Bill Stuart has the bills out for two more auction sales; one for C. Riley, nine miles south of Irma, on April 10th; and the other for George Willets five and one-half miles north of Irma on April 15th.

Mr. P. Milne, the Liberal provincial nominee, was spending a couple of days in town during the week, renewing acquaintances with old friends and making new ones.

Feeling much better after his week's sojourn in the hospital, Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Fabyan, was able to return to his home last week.

Superintendent A. G. Smith, of the National Park, has been away during the past week on business connected with his office.

If you are papering your rooms you will find the latest patterns of Sunworthy wall paper at the Atlas Lumber yard as well as everything else you need at housecleaning times.

Speaking officially, Spring arrived on Thursday last, (March 21st) at least that was the day we entered the Spring equinox. However, with temperatures down to zero and Boreas strictly "on the job" it seems hard to realize that one quarter of 1935 has passed into history.

The Town Fathers have had a gang of men at work this week in draining the surplus snow-water from the streets of town. It may seem to be a nuisance just now, but we may be wishing for this moisture in a couple of months or so.

The catalogue for the 35th annual auction sale of pure-bred bulls, at Calgary on April 3-4, is now available. Secretary Richardson of the Cattle Breeders' association will supply them.

Now is the time to get your house cleaning done before the outside work starts. A full supply of paints, varnishes and wall papers just received at the Atlas Lumber yard. They will be sold at city prices. Joe Welch, mgr.

Mrs. Syd Bibby was a visitor to the city for a day or so during the past week.

Readers are reminded of the big wheel drive which is being staged by the local L.O.L. on Friday evening next in the Masonic hall. A dance is to follow the supper.

We are glad to know that Mr. Arthur Dupre, who was sick last week, is now improved and at his office again.

It will be noted by the advertisement on this page that Mrs. M. E. Peterson, formerly of the "Women's Specialty Shoppe" is returning to business here, and has completed arrangements as manageress of the new "Women's Wear Shoppe" which she will open in the Snyder Block on Monday next, April 1st. A tea-room with restroom facilities is to be included in the installation.

The public are becoming more "claims" conscious, and a larger percentage of the court cases is the result of car accidents. A few dollars per month will provide full protection. See Joe Welch.

SOCIAL CREDIT MEETING

DREW LARGE CROWD
Mr. Landreau, travelling lecturer, held a meeting in the Elita theatre last week in the interest of Social Credit, and spoke to a large audience. He proposed the principles as laid down by Mr. Aberhart, covering the plan and the basic dividend. Many questions were asked and answered.

$ COMING EVENTS $

An auction sale of the effects of the late H. L. Hardy, 16 miles north of Irma, is announced by Bill Stuart, the auctioneer. The sale is dated for Wednesday, March 27th, and will commence at 11 a.m. Lunch will be served.

The members of the L.O.L. and L.O.B.A. are arranging a big benefit wheel drive and dance to be held in the Masonic hall on Friday, March 29th, at 8 p.m. Save the date and have a real good time. Admission 40c. Refreshments.

An auction sale of the effects of Mr. B. Chalk is announced by S. R. Bowerman the auctioneer, to commence at two p.m. Saturday, March 30 and will be held on Third ave.

The Annual Daffodil Tea has been set for April 20th next, in the I.O.O.F. hall, by the W.A. of the United church.
